² Also written as ”Midday”
³ Also written as ”Septentrional North”

- Septentrional is a rarely used word that means "of the north". Maps drawn before 1700, often refer to the northern- or northwestern-most unexplored areas of the world as "Septentrional" i.e. "America Septentrionalis". The term septentrional, actually the adjectival form of the noun septentrión, itself refers to the seven stars of the Big Dipper (Lat: "Septentrión" Nor: “Karlsvognen” or “Storebjørn”).

Also written as “North Aquilon” a 1700’s name for the Northern Wind.

- The Roman equivalent of Boreas was Aquilo, or Aquilon. An alternate, rarer name used for the northern wind was Septentrio, a word derived from septem triones ("seven trios") referring to the constellation Ursa Minor. Septentrio is also the source of the obscure word septentrional, a synonym for boreal meaning "northern".
The divine vastness, the original distribution of the emanated spirits, with the correspondence between each class of spirits and the quaternary, and the quatriple Divine Essence; The Super-Celestial Immensity, the prevarication, as well as the celestial and terrestrial immensity, and the new regime of the emanated and emancipated espirits. The numbers which express the composition of celestial and “terrestrial” realms (after Jupiter) are borrowed from the illustration drawn by Saint Martin.
